3g4s77znn2p6	8	Much of my life in Minneapolis, from 1994 on, has centered on this part of the Mississippi River. I was fortunate that I was able to focus on this area professionally and personally, and my family had years of experiences in this wild urban site. I have felt spiritually renewed in the Lower Trail area of Father Hennepin Bluffs Park, and have led four+ years of habitat care there.	Seeing a mink at the Xcel overflow falls 1999. Walking with Dakota elders there in 2010 or 2011, and seeing a fox family by Nicollet Island. Cutting buckthorn with my family, and years of litter clean ups with neighbors and friends. Supporting ecological planning for the East falls area. Representing the neighborhood in the NSP/Xcel planning for the area in the late 1990s. Serving on the Mississippi River Parkway Commission 2011-2020, and advocating for its protection. Participating in the St. Anthony Falls Historic District Development Guidelines in the 2010s. Leading interpretive walks for kids and adults. Marshalling volunteers for intensive buckthorn removal during the 2020 drawdown. and more. Watching the eagles build a nest in 2013, and seeing the years of young eagles from 2014 to the present. I have many, many photos.		1			2	8

4nj32wjz2cg6	2022-03-07 21:21:09	Mill View meadow, where we are restoring a native meadow/pollinator habitat, and people like to look below at the Mill traces.
4nj32wjz2cg6	2022-03-07 21:21:09	East Owamni river bed, where the Mississippi used to flow, and now watercress grows and wildlife thrives year round. Railroad and industrial structures remain amidst flourishing cottonwood, willow, box elder, and more.
9bo9ree4rtm6	2022-03-08 03:32:18	East Owamni View - the only place near the falls where you can witness the natural falls, and when compared to the historical photos from pre-1880, can imagine the water tumbling over the same bedrock face still visible. This is the entrance to a spiritual sanctuary. We have created a citizen research site here with the DNR's CoverItUp (CIU) program. We are testing the strategy of intensive re-seeding of native plants to deter buckthorn from dominating the site.
6ft8ymi4bks8	2022-03-08 04:24:21	Exposure of the St. Peter Sandstone, where you can feel the extremely soft rock, and imagine why the falls retreated when the Mississippi scoured this soft bedrock.
6ft8ymi4bks8	2022-03-08 04:24:21	Mineral rich, red seeps are visible particularly in winter, giving away the springs and caves behind them, if you are looking. This is a spiritual place.
